Towerwall Listed among “20 Most Promising Security Consulting Companies”

Also named to CRN’s “Women in the Channel” and “The Power 50”

BOSTON – May 12, 2014 – Towerwall (www.towerwall.com), an IT security services provider for small to mid-size businesses, today announced it was selected for inclusion in a list of the 20 “Most Promising Enterprise Security Consulting Companies.”

The list was compiled by the editors of CIO Review, a magazine published in Fremont, Calif.

“Presently, the time is apt to identify some of the right security players in the market. We believe these companies have achieved significant momentum and will rise above the rest. A distinguished panel comprising CIOs and CEOs of public companies, analysts, and the CIOReview editorial board finalized the 20 Most Promising Enterprise Security Consulting Companies. We congratulate the 20 finalists for achieving this vote of respect and wish them a great future ahead,” says CIO.

Michelle Drolet, founder and CEO of Towerwall, was also named to Computer Reseller News (CRN) “Women of the Channel” and to its list of “The Power 50.”

CRN’s “Women of the Channel” is “a special recognition of those female channel executives, who have made great strides and are leaving their indelible mark on the technology channel,” says CRN.

"I'm honored to receive these acknowledgements from CIOReview and CRN Magazine. It has been our motto for many years that there's more to security than a checklist, our Towerwall team works with our customers develop a comprehensive security plan to help build and integrate security testing, policies, practices and user awareness. It's all about customer service and protecting their data"

-Michelle Drolet

According to CRN, The Power 50: Solution Providers is a new list for 2014, honoring those female executives extending their respective company's sphere of influence as trusted advisers.

"This year's submissions included a significant amount of women in Service Provider organizations. Enough to be recognized in their own category," states CRN.
